The sprint was a success, the work was completed before the two-week cycle had finished. A minor problem surrounding the format of the stories was brought to the attention of the group in the first stand-up meeting and was resolved quickly. The members agree the pair-programming elements were helpful at the beginning and the stand-up meeting were a useful tool in understanding progress.